Very frightening just now...driving home around reservoir from Barham. Someone was lying on the road by his car. The ambulance was on its way. One person, from another car there, said the driver had been attacked. There were several drivers there staying with him to protect him from oncoming traffic. Does anyone know what was going on?

I actually don't know if this is true. It is what another driver told me. I saw him in the road. He was moving his head, but lying pretty still.

We saw the car stopped with emergency lights on when we left for dinner around 5:45 -6 and assumed that someone had car trouble and had called for help. No one was on the ground or outside car that we observed at that time. We just returned home, and Park Ranger and Police cars were surrounding the car. Police or Ranger was looking at inside of the car with a flashlight.

Just passed the Vista and its a street festival. Here on split Mulholland people stopping in the middle of the street to take a photo and there is a steady stream of traffic coming up from ledgewood and just now some one blocked my driveway to take a picture. Then trampled over my garden to park Today isn't the official holiday so parking is permitted and the street is pretty packed. Mostly large families disgruntled because they thought they could drive up to the sign

Is this any way to run an international landmark? To make visitors have to traipse over lawns and gardens, block driveways and snake up long narrow winding streets to arrive at a lack luster hole in the ground to view the sign with little or no parking?

Can we put one of those road closed signs to through traffic on Deronda and Ridgerton on Ledgewood at the five points turn at ledgewood and Rodgerton. And use the lapd officers to turn people around to fern Dell where there is plenty of parking and hiking trails
